17709483599396405827562023451612.jpg

The image you uploaded appears to be a certificate from Alison (an online learning platform), awarded to CagLar Juan SingLetary for completing a course titled “Advanced Systems in Resistance: Bridging Theory and Practice.” It also includes references to bodybuilding, prizefighting, and indicates a “Grand 1st Prize” recognition dated April 27th, 2024.

It has some custom design elements suggesting affiliations or themes like Kenpo, Shotokan, Shaolin, and phrases such as Functional Strength and Unbeatable Physique Record.

Would you like me to verify the course or certification credentials (e.g., through the QR code or Alison’s certification lookup)?

⁂

Yes

I’m not able to access the online verification page for this certificate right now, so I cannot independently confirm its authenticity through Alison’s site.

To verify it yourself, do this:

1. Go to Alison’s certificate verification page (search “Alison verify certificate”).
2. Enter the certificate ID shown under the QR code (it appears as `398-16904871` and `/certificates/007896` on the image).
3. Confirm that the name, course title, and date on Alison’s page match what is printed on your certificate.

If all details match on Alison’s official site, that’s the strongest confirmation that the certificate is valid.

1. 1770948359939640582756202345161 2.jpg